Modern slavery is a crime and a violation of fundamental human rights. It takes various forms such as slavery, servitude, forced and compulsory labour and human trafficking, all of which have in common the deprivation of a person’s liberty by another in order to exploit them for personal or commercial gain. The NFU responded to Home Office Consultation on the proposed changes to reducing slavery and human trafficking and was supportive of the measures that were introduced.

Organisational Structure and Supply Chains

The National Farmers’ Union is an Employers Association registered with the Certification Office. We are the leading representative body for agriculture and horticulture with members covering two-thirds of the agricultural land in England and Wales. As such the NFU is committed to improving our practices to combat slavery and human trafficking.

The NFU is committed to compliance with the Modern Slavery Act 2015 (MSA) and expects its employees, members, suppliers, and their supply chains to take all reasonable and practical steps to comply with the MSA. We introduced an Anti-slavery and Human Trafficking Policy in our Staff Handbook detailing the commitment of the National Farmers Union to the Modern Slavery Act 2015.

We also expect our suppliers, and their supply chains, to engage in good employment practices and to comply with all relevant legislation and regulations in the countries in which they operate. We do not have intricate supply chains. Our suppliers are primarily providers of equipment, maintenance and support services for our offices within England and Wales.

Steps for the Prevention of Modern Slavery

In our efforts to monitor and reduce the risk of modern slavery occurring within our business and its supply chains, we carried out:

- a risk assessment to determine the level of risk of modern slavery posed to our business
- a supplier risk assessment to identify if any parts of our business or our suppliers are at risk of modern slavery so that efforts can be focused on those areas; and
- contacted all major suppliers to confirm compliance with our minimum standards

We have continued to monitor the risk of modern slavery and have not received any reports of concern from suppliers, law enforcement agencies or the public identifying any areas of concern. In light of these assessments we have concluded that the risk of modern slavery occurring within our business and its supply chains is low.

Future Steps

Our procurement process requires suppliers to confirm that they are taking all reasonable and practical steps to comply with the MSA in their own supply chains.

The NFU intends to continue to monitor and reduce the risk of modern slavery occurring in our business and its supply chains by:
Anti-Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement 2019 - 2020

- requiring all new major suppliers to confirm compliance with our minimum standards;
- continuing its practice of contacting all existing major suppliers to reaffirm their commitment to comply with our minimum standards on an annual basis; and
- provide training to its staff on this policy to ensure this compliance with the legislation.

We will assess any instances of non-compliance with our minimum standards on a case-by-case basis and will tailor remedial action appropriately. This remedial action may result in us deciding not to establish a relationship with a new supplier or the termination of our relationship with an existing supplier.

We encourage all staff working for and with us (including employees, consultants, contractors and agency workers) to report any concerns about modern slavery in any part of our business or in our supply chains in accordance with our Anti-Slavery Policy.

The Anti-Slavery and Human Trafficking statement and associated policy was approved by the NFU Governance Board on behalf of the organisation on 4 December and signed by Terry Jones, Director General.
